Celebrity photographer Johnny Nunez (at left with his Canon PowerShot SD750) captured Thicke's performance and shares his tips for getting professional results with your photographs.

Compose with style

"Think of what's within your view screen/frame like a painting and look for interesting shapes or angles throughout the picture. With focus, exposure and flash set automatically, you're free to compose more interesting shots."

Great performance

"Shooting digital lets you be an army of one: no lab work involved and the entire process, including sharing images, can be done almost instantly. Subjects also enjoy having a second chance to get it right."

Fast moves

"The right moment can happen at any second so be ready to move quickly! The compactness and quick focus of the PowerShot allow you to capture moments fast and with little effort."

The beauty of Face Detection

"Normally a camera's focus gravitates towards any light surface – a white shirt, a flower, a table – and not the subject's face. Looking through the view finder in a dimly lit room, my naked eye couldn't see Robin's face, but by pressing the shutter, a frame appeared that outlined his face and I was able to trust the camera to automatically give proper exposure and lighting and it did!"
